What is the Perplexity AI lawsuit about?

The Perplexity AI lawsuit brought by Cable News Network Inc. (CNN) revolves around allegations that Perplexity AI, Inc. unlawfully scraped and used CNN's copyrighted news content to train its generative artificial intelligence (GenAI) systems. CNN claims that Perplexity exploited its original reporting without authorization or compensation, violating copyright laws and undermining the economic incentives that support original journalism.

Key Allegations:

- Unauthorized Use of Content: CNN alleges that Perplexity systematically scraped its news articles and other copyrighted material to train its AI models.
- Misrepresentation and Deception: The complaint references external sources describing Perplexity as making things up or being deceptive, such as misrepresenting its user agent to access content without proper disclosure.

- Economic Harm: By using CNN's content without permission, Perplexity allegedly devalued CNN's intellectual property and harmed its business interests.
- Business Operations in Jurisdiction: Perplexity conducts business in the Southern District of New York, which establishes jurisdiction for the case. It is noted that Perplexity is already involved in multiple lawsuits in the same district.

- Unfair competition
- Tortious interference (potentially)

What are the key legal issues in the Rhode Island case?

Based on the excerpts provided from The State of Rhode Island v. KalshiEX LLC (D.R.I. 2026), the key legal issues in the case include:

1. Jurisdiction and Venue

- The case involves questions of both subject-matter jurisdiction and personal jurisdiction:

- The plaintiff (Rhode Island) invokes the Uniform Declaratory Judgments Act, R.I. Gen. Laws § 9-30-1 et seq., as a basis for state-court subject-matter jurisdiction.
- Personal jurisdiction over the non-resident defendant, KalshiEX LLC, is based on its activities in Rhode Island, particularly offering sports-related "event contracts" on prediction markets to Rhode Island residents.
- The case also raises the issue of federal question jurisdiction, suggesting that the matter may involve substantial disputed questions of federal law, potentially impacting its appropriateness for federal court (or at least invoking federal jurisdiction as an alternative).

2. Nature and Legality of Prediction Market Contracts

- A central factual and legal issue appears to concern whether KalshiEX's sports-related event contracts—offered via prediction markets—constitute illegal gambling or other unlawful activity under Rhode Island law.
- The case likely turns on statutory interpretation of Rhode Island gambling laws and how they apply (or should not apply) to modern financial instruments offered through prediction markets.

3. Declaratory Relief and Equitable Remedies

- The State seeks declaratory relief regarding the legality of KalshiEX's operations in Rhode Island.
- The complaint requests “such other and further relief as this Court deems just and equitable”, indicating the possibility of injunctive relief or other equitable remedies aimed at stopping or regulating KalshiEX's activities within the state.

4. Conflict Between State and Federal Jurisdiction

- The pleading references original federal question jurisdiction, suggesting there may be overlapping or competing state and federal legal frameworks that govern the legality of prediction markets.
- This raises potential issues of federal preemption or dual sovereignty, particularly if federal law (such as the Commodities Exchange Act or the CFTC's regulations) regulates prediction markets, while states like Rhode Island claim authority to enforce their own gambling laws.

In summary, the key legal issues encompass jurisdictional disputes, the regulatory status of prediction markets, the application of state gambling laws to fintech platforms, and the interplay between state and federal authority in regulating these emerging financial instruments.
